Note to Applicant

The Resource Management Act 1991 (RMA) has been amended to include a new consent exemption process. An activity that requires resource consent could be assessed to have marginal or temporary effects if Council considers that is no difference in character, intensity, or scale of the activity than there would be if it was permitted and adverse effect on any person are less than minor. These requirements are set out in section 87BB of the RMA.

Deemed permitted marginal or temporary activities are processed at Council's discretion. There is no formal application process for public participation as Council determines what is marginal or temporary and there is no working day timeframe to assess the effects and make a determination.

Sufficient information must be supplied for Council to be able to determine what the effects are and if they are marginal or temporary. Council must issue a written notice if the activity is considered to meet the requirements of the RMA. Written notices lapse within five years unless given effect to prior. Alternatively, Council will issue a refusal notice and a resource consent may be required for the proposed activity.
